This new version introduces the possibility to choose between 2 formats (size or ratio) for zooming in or out in a video clip when playing it on an open window. If one of these formats is selected, the software automatically stores them to the file. After this, the zooming can be accomplished in 2 ways: (1) by dragging the mouse on the border of the image or (2) by rotating the scroll wheel. This usability in its simplicity becomes more flexible for the user because this feature is also available to transcode videos that have been originally recorded in a ratio different to the size of the open window. The new software also introduces a new feature that allows the user to remove or insert specific frames in a video clip while maintaining the same quality as the original video clip (except the inserted frames). Another feature that improves the software's flexibility is that the software supports both GTS and DV format files. These new features are available only to the software's Progea Professional license version. February 7, 2013 - Progea today released Movicon 11.3.
